

Architectural & Builders Magazine

Vol-10 Issue-02 June-2022
www.abmagazine.in

Enliven ARCHITECTS

Ar. Manish Dikshit
designs an exquisite modern Indian home with abundance of details.

Ar. Sudiksha Parekh
Imprints Architects

People visit Alibaug to enjoy the beaches and to view the night sky.

Since the development in this area is increasing due to the ease of connectivity through roads as well as water routes, there is lot of construction work going on this area and we realised that we wanted to avoid concrete, brick and plaster as much as possible to maintain the nature around and keep the air clean.

The villas are constructed out of the local available basalt stone. The roof is done in steel.

People who visit these villas come from cities in search of experience of authenticity of being close to nature and the peace of village life away from the city.

This concept has been at the base of designing a rustic looking space with black stone walls, steel roof and kota floor. The bathrooms also have the walls in stone except the functional wall in stone finish tiles to blend with the rest.

The windows are made slanted to enjoy the night sky while you are sleeping on the bed and enjoy the rains in the monsoons. The space is designed with basic amenities and minimal wood to give a raw and close to nature and close to the soil experience and yet have the comfort of living.